CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background of the Problem

Speaking is an important skill that should be mastered by students in foreign language learning. That's why speaking skill should be mastered by English Department students as foreign language learners. By speaking students carry out conversation, give ideas and exchange information with others. Speaking is the way to use language to communicate each other. It means to use a language one has to communicate through speaking that contains interaction between speaker and listener. Speaking English is not only useful to communicate in daily life but also academic situations. By Speaking English, will help students to get free discussion with friends, lectures, and people around them in their daily life and it can be as practicing of speak fluently. Beside that, Speaking English also helps students in following classroom activities. For example, in subject based discussion like Method of Teaching, English for Children, Linguistic and so forth, students should have a good speaking skill as a presenter.

Ideally, English Department students have to be able to speak by using English in the classroom appropriately. It is because in every sequence of speaking subject I until V they should have a good speaking ability in presentation. They need to have a good speaking ability start from speaking I until speaking V as a basic ability to help and to ease them in subject based discussion class. It means, they are expected to speak in English well. This is reasonable because they are as the candidates of English teacher in the future that have to be able to give the best model to students especially in using English. Therefore, by using English, they will be successful students and teacher for the future.

Furthermore, as a candidate of English teacher for the future, English department students should have a good public speaking skill because they will teach their students later. The students will ignore the teacher if teacher does not give a good performance while sending idea or talking in front of the classroom. Teacher is expected to communicate well in the classroom in order that the learning process will run smoothly and ease the students in catching ideas or information that teacher gave.

To deal with the expectation, English Department of STAIN Batusangkar provides students with a series of speaking subjects. Speaking is a compulsory subject that should be taken by English Department Students. The students should take Speaking I until Speaking V continuously.

In Speaking I students are expected to develop their ability to speak English in basic level with particular emphasis on the accuracy of pronunciation. So it can ease them to continue to speaking II subject. Speaking II aims at developing their ability of intermediate level. It means after they are able to pronounce the word with a good accuracy and emphasis in speaking I they will be easy to practice it in speaking II. The next subject is Speaking III, this subject encourages them up to develop their ability to speak in job interview situations. It means after taking speaking I and speaking II subject they will explore their speaking ability in speaking III through job interview situation. In the fourth semester English Department students take Speaking IV. The aim of this subject is to develop their public speaking skills through speech presentations. It means they will explore their speaking ability through speech presentations. The last series, Speaking V will extend their public speaking skills through storytelling, debates, master of ceremonies, seminars, news reading and the like materials with the extended concept of speaking in public.

Generally, the students who have taken five series of speaking class will be able to speak English well. However they still have some problems whenever they were asked to speak in front of the class, especially doing a public speaking. The problem that students faced such as: most of students are not confidence, felt nervous and fidgeted. For students who have chance at the time they seemed uncomfortable and they also wanted to end their performance as soon as possible. Students seemed to finish sooner their performance. Based on students' argument they confirmed that those problem gave a contribution in their speech performance, so they can not perform in front of class well. These problems also appear among English students who take Speaking V subject.

In speaking V subject, they are expected to provide with basic nature of public speaking and regular practice. It is expected that their ability in public speaking will be improved. After taking this subject students are expected to have good public speaking skill as a presenter, MC, news reader and so forth.

They will be able to speak in front of public places well. Contrastively, they showed some problems such as: most of students are not confidence, felt nervous and fidgeted. The students felt not confidence when they perform in front of the class and they do not focus when they perform because they have lack of confidence. The students felt nervous in front of the class and they will out of their idea and their performance are not good. Those problems happen because of they do not prepare and practice before they come to the real presentation in front of the class. It means that, they can not speak well in public places or in the performance in the class of speaking class subject and the goal of Speaking V subject is not achieved yet.

So, the lecturers of Speaking V subject of English Department of STAIN Batusangkar decided to use Group Work Technique for the first time in Speaking V subject at 2015/2016 academic year to reduce those problems. Actually, in English Department, group work technique is not a new technique that used by lecturer in teaching, but in Speaking subject it is the first time that the lecturer used group work technique. Based on the interview that researcher has done with the Speaking V subject's lecturer Mr.Zulhermindra M.Pd on Monday October 26th 2015, the lecturer said that by using group work technique hopefully can reduce students' problem in Speaking. The lecturer used group work technique because in Speaking V subject the students need some preparations before they come to the real presentation so they can perform well.

By having group work technique the lecturer hopes that the students can eclipse their lack of confidence, their feeling of nervous and fidgeted. The procedures that lecturer used in group work technique are: first, the lecturer divided the students into some groups that consist of 5-7 persons a group. According to Harmer (2003:117) that group work is possible to say that small groups of around five students provoke greater involvement and participation than larger groups. In addition, the students can write a group story or role play a situation which involves five people. They can prepare a presentation or discuss an issue and come to the group discussion. In other words, the concept of group work is students in groups perhaps five or six people that do some activities such as discuss an issue and perform what they have discussed. It can be concluded that group work technique is a teaching technique where the students are divided into several group to do some assignments, task, discussion and presentation. The groups work that given by Speaking V lecturer is doing outside of classroom or the day before the real presentation in front of the class happen. It means that they do the group work as a medium for practicing before come to the real performance.

Moreover, the lecturer explains that in Speaking V subject, the lecturer gave a material to each group to be discussed outside of the classroom. Next, each member of the group should make a video about the material that the group has and the other members of the group should give assessment to the person who make the video as an evaluation or preparation before they come to the real presentation in front of the class. The students should collect their video and the paper of assessment to the lecturer on the day they perform in front of the classroom.

The lecturer explained that they were material and psychological preparations. Material preparation means the cooperation in prepared the material before coming to presentation in front of classroom. Next, psychological preparation means individual preparation to practice their speaking ability and the group as the medium of the preliminary practice. By using group work technique the lecturer hopes the students can increase their confidence and perform better presentation in front of the class.

As a technique, group work has some advantages if the lectures apply it in learning process. Harmer (2001:117) explains that the advantages are: it promotes the amount of talking, it gives greater chance of different opinions and varied contributions than in pair work, it teaches students to cooperation and negotiation each other, students are free to make decision without being told what to do by the teacher and students can choose their level of participation. It means that, by using group work technique the students can explore their knowledge and can be more creative because they can show their opinion and their ability directly in their group. It is supported by Harker and Harker (2007:4) that there are several advantages of group work technique: better communication skills, an opportunity to learn each other, an opportunity to explore an aspect of a project more deeply.

Based on the explanation above, we can conclude that by using group work technique the students will be able to improve their speaking or communication skill because they can convey their opinion and idea through their group. They also can improve their knowledge by group work technique because they can share their idea each other. And they also can have deeply comprehension about the material that they learn.

After conducting an observation in preliminary research with several students of English Department at fifth semester on October 16th , the results showed that there were different perception by the students toward the group work technique that applied by English lecturer in Speaking V subject. There were some students thought that using group work technique was useful to improve their speaking ability and help them be more confidence when they perform in front of class, and there were some students thought that group work technique that used by lecturer did not run well or not give any change to their speaking ability. It means that the students have positive and negative perception toward the group work technique that used by lecturer.

Richard (2010:436) states that perception is the recognition and understanding of events, objects, and stimuli through the use of senses (sight, hearing, touch, etc.). Perception helps sort out and organize the complex and varied input received by our senses of sight, smell, touch, taste, and hearing. The key word in this definition is interpreting.

It can be concluded that the students at fifth semester of English Department of STAIN Batusangkar have positive and negative perception toward group work technique that used by lecturer. Based on the perceptions by students on group work technique, the researcher is interested in conducting research entitled: “Students’ Perception on the Used of Group Work Technique in Improving Their Speaking Ability”. This research is conducted to the fifth semester students of English Department of STAIN Batusangkar, Academic Year 2015/2016.

B. Identification of the Problem

Speaking practice might be the most dependable way to true communication in developing the learner’s ability. The speaking ability of the English Department students of STAIN Batusangkar can be considered good because some of them know how to express their feeling and ideas in speaking. But, some of students think that speaking is difficult than the other skill, they do not have braveness to practice their speaking in doing their task because of some reason, such as: most of students are not confidence, felt nervous and fidgeted.

Group work technique allows the students to practice their speaking well. By having group work technique the lecturer hopes that the students can eclipse their lack of confidence, their feeling of nervous and fidgeted. They can prepare a presentation or discuss an issue and come to the group discussion. In other words, the concept of group work is students in groups perhaps five or six people that do some activities such as discuss an issue and perform what they have discussed.

Based on the previous explanation, the researcher tries to find out the students perception on the use of group work technique in improving their speaking ability.

C. Limitation and Formulation of the Problem

Based on the background and identification of the problem above, the researcher would like to limit the problem on the students' perception on the use of group work technique in improving their speaking ability in Speaking V subject by the fifth semester students of English Department of STAIN Batusangkar registered in 2015/2016 academic year.

To be more specific, the formulation of the problem can be stated as follow:

1. What is the students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject in term of cognitive component?
2. What is the students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject in term of affective component?
3. What is the students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject in term of conative component?

D. Definition of the Key Terms

To avoid ambiguity and mistake in understanding about the key terms that are used in this research, the defenition of the key terms are explained as following:

1. Students perception refers to the fifth semester of English Teaching Department students' opinion, responds and assumption on the use of group work technique in improving their speaking ability.
2. Group Work Technique refer to a technique that used by the lecturer in Speaking V subject where the lecturer assigned students together in a group which involves five or more students to prepare presentation, discussion and finish some problems, tasks or assignments together in order to achieve the goals of learning process.

3. Speaking Ability is described as the fifth semester of English Teaching Department students' ability to report acts or situation, in precise words, or the ability to converse or to express a sequence of ideas fluently.

E. Purpose of the Research

The purpose of this research is to find out the fifth semester of English Teaching Department Students' Perception on the Use of Group Work Technique in Speaking V subject.

F. Significance of Research

The result of this research is expectedly to be a useful reference for:

- a. Students

The result of this research may give some informations about their perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject.

- b. English lecturers

The result of this research can give a positive income to English lecturers especially to speaking lecturers in preferring the problem around speaking subject and choose a good technique that can improve students speaking ability.

c. Researcher

This research gives valuable knowledge and experience to the researcher. In addition, this research is one of the requirements to get undergraduate degree (S. Pd. I) at STAIN Batusangkar.

CHAPTER II

REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE

A. Review of Related Theories

1. Speaking Ability

a. Definition of Speaking Ability

Speaking is one of four important skills in foreign language learning. There are some experts giving the definition of speaking: First, Tarigan (1990:3-4) defines that speaking is a language skill that is developed in child life, which is produced by listening skill, and at that period speaking skill is learned. Then, Bihari (2013: 1) states that speaking is a way in express or exchange thoughts and feelings through using language. Next, Nunan (2003: 48) defines speaking as a productive aural or oral skill. Aural is related to the process of listening the message from somebody's talking; whereas oral is related to give the respond from the speaker's talking. It happen when they make a conversation or dialogue. One speaker will talk about something and the other will response it.

Furthermore, Hedge (2000: 261) defines speaking as a skill by which they [people] are judged while first impressions are being formed. Speaking defined as a process of building and sharing meaning through the use of verbal or oral form (Chaney, 1988:13 and Gebhard, 1996:169).

Brown (2004: 140) says that speaking is a productive skill that can be directly and empirically observed. Speaking is an interactive process of constructing meaning that involves producing, receiving and processing information. Its means are dependent on the context in which it occurs, including the participants themselves, their collective experiences, the physical environment and the purpose for speaking.

Moreover, Tarigan (1981:15) states that speaking ability is a skill to communicate a speech articulation or to speak a talk for expressing an idea and a message. Lado (1961: 240) points out that speaking ability is described as the ability to report acts or situation, in precise words, or the ability to converse or to express a sequence of ideas fluently. It can be concluded that speaking ability is a skill, which is communicating the speech sound for expressing and conveying a messages or ideas.

Harris (1994) builds on this stating that speaking is a complex skill requiring the simultaneous use of a number of different abilities which often develop at different rates. He adds that there are five components of speaking ability: Pronunciation, Grammar, Vocabulary, Fluency and Comprehension.

Speaking ability is the students' ability in expressing their ideas orally which is represented by the scores of speaking. Speaking is only an oral trail of abilities that it got from structure and vocabulary, Freeman (in Risnadedi, 2001: 56-57) stated that speaking ability more complex and difficult than people assume, and speaking study like study other cases in study of language, naturalize many case to language teachers.

Based on the definitions above, it can be concluded that speaking is a productive skill to construct meaning that involves producing, receiving and processing information which use popular expression either verbal or non-verbal symbols. By speaking we also accept information, process it and get the meaning of that information.

b. Elements of Speaking

Speaking has several elements. Those elements are support each other. It is supported by Harmer (2001:269) that speaking is the ability to speak fluently presupposes not only knowledge of language features, but also the ability to process information and language on the spot. He further said that among the elements further necessary for spoken production are the following:

1) Connected speaking

It is effective speaker of English need to be able not only to produce the individual phonemes of English but also to use fluent connected speech meaning. It means, as a speaker of English we should be able use the language that can understood by other and can connect what we are saying with the listener understanding.

2) Expressive devices

It is native speaker of English change the pitch and stress of particular part of utterances, very volume, speech and show by other physical and non verbal or they allow the extra expression of emotion and intensity. It means, the native speaker of English use several expression in speaking.

3) Lexis and grammar

It is spontaneous speech is marked by the use of a number of common lexical phrases, especially in the performance of certain language function. It can be understand that, the speaker of English should have ability in produce correctly grammatical used in speaking.

4) Negotiation Language

Negotiation Language is effective speaking benefits from the negotiators language we use to seek classification and show the structure of what we are say. It means that, the language that we used can be acceptable by the listener and the listener also can catch the meaning of what we are saying.

It can be conclude to speak fluently someone must know about elements necessary for spoken production. They are connected speech, expressive devices, lexis and grammar, and negotiation language. It means that the element is important in speaking English. All messages that delivered will be acceptable by all communicants if mastered those elements.

c. The Importance of Speaking

The importance of speaking is more revealed with the integration of the other language skills. Speaking is important skill outside and inside the classroom as well. Many companies and organizations look for people who speak English very well for the purpose of communicating with other people. So, speakers of foreign languages have more opportunities to get jobs in such companies. Baker and Westrup (2003: 05) support that a student who can speak English well may have greater chance for further education, of finding employment and gaining promotion.

Ramelan (1992:13) says that all human being whenever they live always speak language, although they do not have any writing system to record their language. It means that human in every side of the world share their idea or exchange information through speaking although they do not have any writing or recording of what they have told before. Thus speaking capability can be measured whether a foreign language learner is successful in learning or not. But in mastering speaking skill can be seen not only from the performance of learners in spoken, but also have to see from their competence in using the language.

Based on the explanation above, speaking is an important skill to be mastered by students outside and inside classroom. By mastering speaking skill, the students will have a good performance and will show their competence.

d. Principles on Teaching Speaking

In teaching speaking, teachers or lecturers are usually have several principles to make the speaking class run well and the goal of teaching speaking will be achieved.

As states by Nunan (2003: 55, 56) that there are at least four principles on teaching speaking. First, give students practice with both fluency and accuracy. Accuracy is the extent to which students' speech matches what people actually say when they use the target language. Fluency is the extent to which speakers use the language quickly and confidently, with few hesitations or unnatural pauses, false starts, word searches, etc. Teacher must provide students with fluency-building practice and realize that making mistakes is a natural part of learning a new language. Second, provide opportunities for students to talk by using group work or pair work, and limiting teacher talk. It is important for us as language teachers to be aware of how much us talking in class so don't take up all the time the students could be talking. Pair work and group work activities can be used to increase the amount of time that learners get to speak in the target language during lessons. Next, plan speaking tasks that involve negotiation for meaning. Learners make progress by communicating in the target language because interaction necessarily involves trying to understand and make teacher understood. This process is called negotiating for meaning. It involves checking to see if you've understood what someone has said, clarifying your understanding, and confirming that someone has understood your meaning. Last, Design classroom activities that involve guidance and practice in both transactional and interactional speaking. When talking with someone outside the classroom, they usually do so for interactional or transactional purposes. Interactional speech is communicating with someone for social purposes. Transactional speech involves communicating to get something done, including the exchange of goods and/or services.

Based on the explanation above, it can be conclude that there are four principles on teaching speaking. The principles are; Practice, group work or pair work, plan speaking tasks, and the last Design classroom activities.

2. Group Work Technique

a. Definition of Group Work Technique

A group has to have a membership of two or more people. Group work does not mean that students sit side by side at the same table to talk with each other. It does not mean assigning a report to a group of students where one student does all the work and the others just put their names on it. Jowers (2007:1) defines that a group is clearly more than just a collection of people. Based on English Dictionary a group is a number of people or things gathered, placed, or classed together for some purpose. When think about working in a group, the key words are for some purpose.

Group Work is the most satisfactory method for teaching oral work and far more oral practice; it is an attempt to solve serious linguistic and pedagogical problems. Lewis (1977: 289) suggests that the group work technique has been utilized effectively to facilitate individual growth and to give students a chance to help one another, to learn from one another, and to communicate with one another. Each group member, the group leader, and the group as a whole set specific objects for the group process and reach agreement on the kinds of help that they will try to provide for one another.

Moreover, Salas (2004:1) argues that for many years English teachers have been using a variety of techniques to encourage interaction and participation among learners. Talking about techniques in teaching, many teachers assumed that technique has the important point. Many teachers establish rules, procedures and techniques at the beginning of the school year or at the early meeting. Iskandarwassid and Dadang (2010:66) explain that technique as trick, tactic or strategy that will be used by teachers or lectures to achieve the goal of learning process. They divided several techniques in the learning, there are: discussion techniques, group work techniques, discovery techniques, simulation techniques, unit teaching techniques, brainstorming techniques, experiment techniques, lecture techniques, team teaching techniques and drill techniques.

One of example of teaching technique above is group work technique. Group work technique is not new in education. It is the common technique that used by teacher or lectures in learning process. Davis (1993:7) defines that group work technique can be used to achieve a range of teaching and learning goals (related to process and product). Furthermore, Harmer (2001:117) describes that students can work in group which involves five people or more. They can prepare a presentation or discuss an issue and come to a group decision. So, students do such task work that given by teacher or lecturer in group.

In addition, Iskandarwassid and Dadang (2010:68) argue that group work technique is kinds of activity where teacher divide their students become several groups that consist of five students or seven students. In group, they are expected to solve or finish some problems and task or assignment together. In school, college or university there are many forms of group work technique. Teachers or lectures can build groups to share the reading for assignments, to discuss assignment, presentation and others. Then Richard (2010:256) defined group work (in language teaching) a learning activity which involves a small group of learners working together. The group may work on a single task, or on different parts of a larger task. Tasks for group members are often selected by the members of the group.

Several studies have presented empirical support for the effect of group work on developing students' language skills, Larcombe et al. (2007) evaluated a program for a writing group at the University of Melbourne in Australia to specify the benefits of developing the identity of thesis writers through group cooperation. They concluded that the writing groups gave writers the chance to give and receive feedback on their work and to develop their identity as thesis writers. Speaking received similar importance in Vietnam when Tuan and Neomy (2007) investigated group work pre-task planning and its effect on post planning individual oral presentation of 22 EFL second year college students at Hanoi who were enrolled in a four-year English program. Results showed group planning to focus on content rather than language and mixed proficiency grouping to benefit the most. Also in groups learners produced more ideas and learned more as more interaction took place. They concluded that group work aids students' in their oral presentation. As for reading skills, Wichadee (2007), in Thailand, wanted to find out the effect of group work technique on improving students' reading skill. A group work technique was implemented on 40 first year students of the School of Communication and Arts at Bangkok University who were enrolled in an English course. A pre-test, post-test technique, a questionnaire, cooperative learning assessment, individual quiz and an interview were used. Wichadee reported that students benefited from group work in their reading comprehension, for example, their reading skill improved, their interaction increased, they felt at ease, learnt more, enjoyed their time and learnt how to work with one another.

More recently, Brown (2008) argued that group work teaches learners to respect the learning pace of other learners in the group and improve their English language skills. It also created a stress-free environment where learners feel at ease. Gibson (2004) in his research stated about the effectiveness of group working. He revealed that arranging the students in groups of four or five at the beginning of each class is the first step towards developing students' conversation abilities and effectively managing large classes. Supported by Kayi (2006), she agreed that working in groups could create a classroom environment where students have real-life communication, authentic activities, and meaningful tasks that promote oral language.

Richard and Nunan (1987), state that group work provides opportunities for children to talk freely, and it is generally accepted that this improves their language. To increase the amount of practice of each student, the teacher needs to divide students in the class into groups and give sample practice through relevant and realistic language activities.

From the explanation above, it can be concluded that group work technique is a technique where a teacher or a lecturer put students together in a group which involves five or more students to prepare presentation, discussion and finish some problems, tasks or assignments together in order to achieve the goals of learning process. By group work technique students also can improve their English language skills, developing students' conversation abilities and effectively managing large classes.

b. Types of Group Work Technique

Mulyono (2011:107) argues that there are several types of group work technique. They are short-term group and long-term group. Short-term group means that students only work at the time of learning process or incidental. Students only work a few minutes or an hour. After the task or assignment has finished the group will be dispersed by teacher or lecturer. On the other hand, long-term group deals with students not only work at the time of learning process, but will be continued the outside of class or specific time until task or assignment has been finished.

Furthermore, there are several basic types or models of groups, but a variety of ways in which these groups can be implemented. The first type is informal learning group deals with discussing in a lecture but only within a single class session. The second type is formal learning group are brought together to complete a designated task or assignment which may occur over several weeks or until the assignment is graded. The third type is project teams are also more or less permanent, and feature mainly in construction and information system. The last type is self-managed work teams called “high performance work teams”. They are more permanent than the other types of group or team models mentioned above (Davis, 1993:2000).

The others types of group work technique can be seen through the members of group. Ahmadi (2005:92) classifies the group based on the amount of the members of a group. The first type is the small group. In the small group the members consist of two until three students. The second type is the medium group. In the medium group the members consist of three until seven students. The third type is the large group. It consists of nine until fifteen students. And the last type is ideal group. In ideal group consist of five until seven students.

In addition, Barkley, Cross and Major (2012:65) explain that a group can be formed on the goals of learning, activity and time. They divided three types of group. The first one is formal group. It is formed quickly and randomly only for short time. The second one is informal group. The goals of this group are to make paper and presentation. Students work in this group until they finished until several meetings or weeks. And the last one is basic groups. The members of group work together as long as one semester or one year. The goals are to do many projects or assignments and to help teacher to achieve the goals of learning process.

c. Advantages and Disadvantages of Group Work Technique

As a technique, group work has advantages and disadvantages if teacher or lectures apply it in learning process. Harmer (2001:117) explains that the advantages are: it promotes the amount of talking, it gives greater chance of different opinions and varied contributions than in pair work, it teaches students to cooperation and negotiation each other, students are free to make decision without being told what to do by the teacher and students can choose their level of participation. On the other hand, the disadvantages are its very noisy, some students are not enjoying in group, and some students are passive whereas other dominates.

Moreover, Harker and Harker (2007:4) argue that there are several advantages and disadvantages of group work. The advantages are better communication skills, an opportunity to learn each other, an opportunity to explore an aspect of a project more deeply. And the disadvantages are personality clashes occur, a few members do most of the work, gain most of learning, others find it hard to participate fully, they may not face or structure their work to meet deadlines and member focus on the outcome and ignore the process.

Furthermore, Salas (2004:4) adds that group work also has disadvantages that are important to explore. It is relate to noise problem. Students speak all at once trying to accomplish their task, and this causes noise that may bother other colleagues.

It can be concluded that group work technique has advantages and disadvantages when teachers or lectures apply it as technique in teaching in classroom. While, the disadvantages of group work technique can increase several problems in applying especially among the members.

d. Aspects in Group Work Technique

The structure of the interaction in group is created or decided by the aspect of group. Ahmadi (2005:89) says that there are five aspects in group-work technique. The first aspect is goals or objectives are the important point in group. If there is a clear and good goal or objectives, it will give contribution to the result of the group. The second aspect is the well group should have a leader. Every group should discuss who will be a leader in his or her group. Sometime, the leaders are pointed by teacher or lecturer. The third aspect is a group should have several norms. Where the norm can be from teachers or lecturers and even come from students that work in group. Through norm the quality and interaction in group can be done well. The fourth aspect is interaction should be built in each member of group. The interaction can be verbal or non verbal. And the last aspect is each member should have two levels of feeling. They are individual feeling and group feeling. The group feeling means a feeling that appears because of each member have some responsibility to produce and finish a task or work.

Furthermore, Mulyono (2011:108) also classifies the aspects of group work. They are: group should have motivation to work, problems in group should be solved together, competition in group creates the students to work, and group should create good condition among the student.

In order to apply group work technique, teachers or lecturers should be considered when applying a technique in classroom. They should think about what kinds of technique that suitable with their subjects or their students. In using group work technique it should be considered when one or more of the following standards are met: (a) some goals of the course are best achieved through students working in groups (b) the task can only be carried out by a group (c) the task is too large or complex for one person resource limitations require group, for example because of limited equipment or limited time (University teaching Development Center: 2004). It can be summarized that in using group work technique teachers or lecturers should know several standards or norms to make sure whether it can be used in a subject or not.

There are several points that should be considered by teachers or lecturers in order to apply group work technique. This technique can be applied because of several requisites. Mulyono (2011:106) states that this technique can be made based on the capability students in learning, the kinds of subjects or work that will be learnt, the region or place where they live to make easy the coordination of work, randomly, lottery without seeing or considering the other factors and the gender of the students.

Furthermore Barkley, Cross and Major (2012:69) classify that there are three method to decide the members of groups. The first method is randomly. It consist of freely, odd-even, mention number orderly, games card, from a line, and matching texts. The second method is students' choice. It consists of freely and the chairman of a class. And the last method is teacher or lecturers' choice. It consists of raise hand, essay, data, mark or score and study style.

Moreover, Ahmadi (2005:92) adds that there are several ways to divide students into group. They are based on the seating of students, gender, capability, the kinds of subjects or work that will be learnt and interest or talent of student.

It can be seen that there are many ways that can be done in order to apply group work technique. They are: based on capability, kinds of subjects, the region or place, randomly, lottery, students' choice, teacher or lecturers' choice, based on the seating of students, and gender.

3. Perception

a. Definition of perception

There are several opinions from the experts related to definition of perception. First, Gary and Alan (2000:74) defined that Perception is the process of interpreting the messages of our senses to provide order and meaning to the environment. Perception helps sort out and organize the complex and varied input received by our senses of sight, smell, touch, taste, and hearing. The key word in this definition is interpreting. Second, Desmita (2009:117) states that perception is the process of discriminating among stimuli and of interpreting their meaning. Next, Oxford dictionary (2013:1) mentions that perception is the ability to see, hear, or become aware of something through the sense. It is supported by Walgito (2004:87), that perception as a process of receiving the stimulus through the sense to get the conclusion about an object or event. Then Devito (2009:61) proposes that perception is the process by which you became aware of object, especially people through your senses: sight, smell, taste, touch, and hearing. It means that perception can appear if there is information from outside through in mind or brain. It can be understood that perception is a process to know or aware about something through our senses.

Moreover, Richard (2002:391) states that perception is the recognition and understanding of events, objects, and stimuli through the use of senses (sight, hearing, touch, etc). Then, Riza (2012:4) proposes that perception is a process of receiving the stimulus through the sense to get the conclusion about an object or event. It can be concluded that perception in the brain to get a summary about an event or object.

While, Fadhillah (2009:67-68) argues perception is a part cognitive of individual soul and also it is rather complex cognitive process. Beside Chaplin in Fadhillah (2009:68) defines that perception is a process for knowing and recognizing objects and also objective cases by helping of sense. While Rita in Fadhillah (2009:67-68) assumes that perception is a process in which we organizing and interpreting a stimulus in an environment. The last, Slameto (2003:102) defines perception as process that had correlated how to accept information in human brain.

Based on several explanations above, it can be concluded that perception is a process or ability of receiving, recognizing and understanding an object or event through the senses to get the conclusion about the object or the event. Human also makes their own perception about something that they received in their brain.

b. Principles of perception

According to Sobur (2012:8), principles of perception are complexity, proximity, unity and closure. In complexity, there is no relation between messages that enter our brain. In proximity, message that physically same each other. In unity, people make perception about everything they see together as unity. In closure, people make perception a picture that is not complete as a picture that is complete.

According to Slameto (2003:103), there are five basic principles of perception that the teachers need to know. Those principles are as follows:

- 1) Perception is relative not absolute. It means that a teacher can predict students' perception about the next lesson because the teacher had known students' perception about the previous lesson
- 2) Perception is selective. In this principle, a teacher must be able to emphasize a certain part of the lesson gain students attention
- 3) Perception has arrangement. This principle shows that a teacher must convey the subject systematically in teaching a subject.
- 4) Perception influenced by expectation and readiness. In this Principle, someone's expectation and readiness will influence her/his perception about an object or event around her or him
- 5) Perception is different both individual and group to another. In this principle, someone's perception or group perception is different from other or group even though s/he is in the same situation or stimulus.

Based on explanation above, it can be summarized that there are nine principles of perception. Those principles are complexity, proximity, unity and closure, relative not absolute, selectivity, having arrangement, influenced by expectation and readiness and being different both individual and group to another.

c. Types of perception

Perception can be divided into some types. According to Richard (2002:391) states that there are three types of perception, namely: Visual; visual perception of information and stimulus means someone deals with visual object or event. Audio; audio perception of information and stimulus detect different kinds of caustic signals and to guide differences in acoustic characteristic as their frequency, amplitude, duration, order of occurrence and rate of presentation. And speech; speech perception is the understanding or comprehension of speech.

In addition, Jalaluddin (2007:55) states that there are two kinds of perception, positive and negative perception. The positive perception of perception or view of an object and leads to a situation in which subject perceive tend to accept objects arrested in accordance with his personal. Next, negative perception that perception or view of an object and refers to a state in which subjects perceive tend to reject objects arrested for not suit his personality. It means that although it is often realized, the stimulus will be perceived always been a stimulus that are relevant and meaningful to him.

Comparative Table for Types of Perception

Richard (2002)	Jalaluddin (2007)
1) Visual perception : visual perception of information and stimulus means someone deals with visual object or event	1) Positive Perception : perception or view of an object and leads to a situation in which subject perceive tend to accept objects arrested in accordance with his personal
2) Audio perception: audio perception of information and stimulus detect different kinds of caustic signals and to guide differences in acoustic characteristic as their frequency, amplitude, duration, order of occurrence and rate of presentation	2) Negative Perception: perception or view of an object and refers to a state in which subjects perceive tend to reject objects arrested for not suit his personality.
3) speech perception: speech perception is the understanding or comprehension of speech.

Based on the comparative table above, it can be concluded that there are several types of perception including visual, auditory, speech, positive and negative perception. Which is the tree types: visual, auditory, speech perception are classified consist of human sense including ear, eyes, and tongue. And the two types: positive and negative perceptions are classified consist of human feeling.

d. Factors Influencing Perception

People have different perception to object or event. It can be influenced by some factors. Shaleh (2004:128) states that there are four factors influencing perception, namely; selective attention, criterion of stimuli, value and need of individual, and experience. For selective attention, people always get many stimuli from their environment. But actually, they must not response all of the stimuli. They can select the stimulus that will be observed.

For criterion stimuli, the stimuli have different criterion. Usually, moving stimuli are more interesting than unmoving stimuli. Big stimuli are more interesting than little stimuli, and so on. For value and need of individual, teachers and singer will give different perception about method of teaching. And for the experience, the person who has experience about something will give different perception with person who does not have experience about it.

Furthermore, Walgito (2004:89) states that there are three factors that influencing perception, namely:

1) Object

Object can cause the stimulus that has contact with the senses or receptor. This stimulus can come from outside or inside of the person who give perception toward something but mostly it comes from outside of the person. For example, when a student gives his or her perception toward the teacher language use in teaching, it can be states that the object in this case is teacher language. In other words, the stimulus comes from outside of the person.

2) The senses

The senses or receptor is the tool, to receive the stimulus. Besides, there is also sensory nerve as the tool to continue the stimulus to the central of nerve or brain. Then, there is also motoric nerve to respond or give reactor toward the stimulus. Its example is when people are asked to give perception toward a scenery painting, they can give that perception because they have shown the painting through their receptor that is the eyes. It is continued then to their brain and finally they can express their perception toward that painting.

Based on the theories above, it can be understood that many factors influences the perception. Differences person, difference characters, difference experience and other differences will influence how people perceive an object or event. So, different students' with different experience and other difference will give different perception towards group work that giving by speaking V lecturer.

e. Components of Perception

Perception is made by some parts. It is called components of perception. According to Walgito (2012:12) there are three components of perception. They are: cognitive, conative or action component, and affective or emotional components. First: cognitive component, it is related to knowledge, opinion and belief, that is good things that relate how person's perception toward an object. It refers to how someone sees or interprets something or an object. Second: Conative or action component, it is related to action toward an object. This component indicates intensity of attitude that is indicates big or small action tendency of someone toward an object. The last one is affective components is related to like and dislike toward an object. Like is positive thing, while dislike is negative thing. This component indicates attitude's direction, positive and negative.

Furthermore, Masbow (2009: 4) states that there are three components of perception: Cognitive (perceptual), Affective (emotional), and Conative (emotional) component. First, Cognitive (perceptual) component is component that related to someone's knowledge, opinion, and belief toward attitude's object. Then, Affective component (emotional component) is component of perception that related to like and dislike toward attitude's object. The last, Conative component (action component) is component of perception that related to action tendency toward attitude's object.

It is supported by Baron in Byrne in Masbow (2009: 4) he stated that there are three components of perception. First, Cognitive is component of perception that related to someone's knowledge, opinion and belief toward attitude's object. Second, Affective component of perception is related to like and dislike toward attitude's object. The human feeling toward something can positive and negative. Last, Conative is component of perception that related to action tendency toward attitude's object.

B. Review of Relevant Studies

Some researchers have conducted studies related to this research. The first study is under title “Students’ Perception Toward the Principles of Group Discussion Technique (A Study in Linguistic for ELT II Class at STAIN Batusangkar in 2012/2013 Academic Year)” done by Yanti Agutina (2013). She found : 45 (73.77%) students had positive perception toward the principle of 13 (21.31%) and 13 (21.31%) students had strongly positive perception toward the principle of Group Discussion Technique that is introduced in Linguistic for ELT II class, so they will serious and active in following the presentation of group discussion technique, consequently they will understand about the material and have a good achievement.

In the other hand, 5 (4.92%) students had negative perception toward Group Discussion Technique that is introduced in Linguistic for ELT II class, they will not participate in group discussion presentation; consequently they will not understand about the material and have bad achievement. The similarities between these researches with the research that will be done by the researcher are the first variable that’s the students’ perception. Those two researches are discussed about the same phenomenon that is about students’ perception on something.

The differences of between these researches with the research that will be done by the researcher are the second variable that’s Principles of Group Discussion Technique, because the researcher will be focus on group work technique. And the other difference is the informant of the research. Yanti Agutina focused on ELT II Class at STAIN Batusangkar in 2012/2013 Academic Year but the researcher will focus on the fifth semester students on Speaking V subject Class at STAIN Batusangkar in 2015/2016 Academic Year.

The next study is under title “Students’ Perception on English Club as a Bridge to Build Students’ Speaking Ability and its Contribution to Their Speaking Achievement (A study of the Second Semester Students of English Department of STAIN Batusangkar Registered in 2012/2013 Academic Year)” done by Silvia Ningsih (2013) the researcher got students’ perception on English Club as a bridge to build students’ speaking ability only contributes 3.88% toward their speaking achievement. The similarities between these researches with the research that will be done by the researcher are the first variable that’s the students’ perception.

Those two researches are discussed about the same phenomenon that is about students’ perception on something. The differences of between these researches with the research that will be done by the researcher are the second variable that’s English Club as a Bridge to Build Students’ Speaking Ability and its Contribution to Their Speaking Achievement, on the other hand the researcher will be focus on group work technique. And the other difference is the research design. Silvia Ningsih used quantitative research, on the other hand the researcher will use qualitative research.

The last is under title “Students’ Perception Toward the Advantages of Diary Writing Technique by the Lecturer in Writing Class (A Study of Fifth Semester Students of English Department of STAIN Batusangkar Registered in 2013/2014 Academic Year)” done by Tristia Handayani (2015). She found that there are three students perceptions toward advantages diary writing technique. They are cognitive perception, affective perception, and conative perception. The similarities between these researches with the research that will be done by the researcher are the first variable that’s the students’ perception. Those two researches are discussed about the same phenomenon that is about students’ perception on something. Tristia Handayani focused on the Fifth Semester Students of English Department of STAIN Batusangkar Registered in 2013/2014 Academic Year but the researcher will focus on the fifth semester students on Speaking V subject Class at STAIN Batusangkar in 2015/2016 Academic Year.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

A. Research Design

In this research the researcher used descriptive research. According to Gay (2000:11), descriptive research involves collecting data in order to answer questions about the current status of the subject or topic of study. It means that this research concerns to describe students' perception on the use of group work technique in improving their speaking ability of English department students at STAIN Batusangkar registered in 2015/2016 academic year.

B. Population and Sample

1. Population

According to Sudijono (2007:117), population is generalization area consist of object that has quality and specific characteristic which is determined as research and then having conclusion from the research. Gay (2000:122) states that population is the group of interest to the researcher, the group to which she or he would like the results of the study to be generalized. The population in this research was 86 students of the fifth semester English Department at STAIN Batusangkar (See Appendix 1). They were divided into three classes. It can be seen in the following table:

Table 3.
The Description of the Population

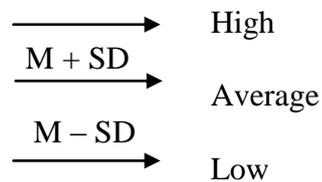

No	Classes	Number of Students
1	TBI A	25 students
2	TBI B	31 students
3	TBI C	30 students
Total of population		86 students

2. Sample

According to Gay (2000:121), sampling is the process of selecting number of individual for a study such a way that they represent the larger group from which they are selected. The purpose of the sampling is to gain information about the population by using sample. The samples of this research were 71 students for research sample and for tried out was 15 students of the fifth semester English Department Students of STAIN Batusangkar in 2015/2016 Academic Year.

The sample of this research has been taken by applying stratified proportional random sampling because the students have different ability in Speaking V subject. Gay (2000:126) states that stratified sampling is the process of selecting a sample in such way that identified subgroup in the population are represented in the sample in the same proportion that exists in the population. The researcher classified the sample into three groups. They were high, average, and low groups. These groups were classified based on the Mean Score (M) and Standard Deviation (SD) of their midterm test score in the Speaking V subject. Mean score and Standard Deviation of each class were: TBI A (M: 66, SD: 10), TBI B (M: 71, SD:

7), and TBI C (M 73, SD: 11). To classify criteria, the researcher used the formula from Anas (2005:176) as follow:

After conducting the ways suggested by Anas above, the researcher determined the sample size. To take sample researcher used formula that provided by Slovin in Sevilla in Bambang (2007:137), that is:

$$n = \frac{N}{1 + Ne^2}$$

Where :

n : Sample

N : Population

e : Limit of error (5% atau 0.05)

$$n = \frac{86}{1 + 0.215} = \frac{86}{1.215} = 71 \text{ (83\%)}$$

The numbers of sample were described in the following table:

C. Technique of Data Collection

1. Research Instrument

The questionnaire was used as an instrument to know students' perception on the use of group work technique improving their speaking ability. According to Arikunto (2005:102), questionnaire is a collection of question of the research to be given to the respondents in order to get the respond of the question. The kinds of questionnaire that used were closed questionnaire.

The close questionnaire was used because of the main purpose of the questionnaire is to get information which relevant to the research purpose, so that the researcher limited the respondents answers by using close questionnaire. The instrument consisted of several items that expressed students' perception on the use of group work technique in improving their speaking ability. The items of questionnaire constructed in Bahasa Indonesia to make easier for the respondents to understand.

The administered of questionnaire for try out was on Monday-Saturday, January 18th – 23rd, 2016. There were 15 students taken as sample for tryout. The items of the try out questionnaire were 50 items. After analyzing the validity and reliability, the researcher got 38 items valid, 10 items revised, and 2 discarded. Then administered questionnaire of test was on Tuesday-Saturday, February 2nd – 13th, 2016. The samples of research were 71 students, and the items of the questionnaire were 48 items.

In order to score and measure the questionnaire, Likert Scale Technique was adopted. This scale used because the respondents choose one option that is best approval with their view. According to Gay (2000:156), a Likert scales ask participants to responds the series of statement they were strongly agree (SA), agree (A), undecided (U), disagree (D), or strongly disagree (SD) with each statement.

The questionnaire consist of two types of statement, they are positive and negative statement. The score gave based on the type of each item. If the item was positive, the score arrange as follow; SA=5, A=4, U=3, D=2, SD=1. In contrast if the item is negative, the score arrange as follow; SA=1, A=2, U=3, D=4, SD=5.

In doing a research, there are important principles of instrument. According to Gay (2000:161), the most important principles of instrument are validity and reliability.

1. Validity

Validity is the most important characteristic of a test in order to get the appropriate of data collection. According to Gay (2000:161), validity is the most important characteristics of test or measuring instrument can posses. Validity is the degree to which a test measures what is supposed to be measure. In this case the researcher used questionnaire in collecting the data. It means that questionnaire arrange must measure what the purpose is to measure. Therefore, in measured the students' perception on group work technique to improve their speaking ability by using questionnaire. To find out validity of the questionnaire, the researcher analyzed using construct validity. To validate in this case, the questionnaire was constructed based on relevant theories that were formulated on the table of specification that proposed by experts (See Appendix 2). Then, it was consulted to the advisors about indicator and item which consist of positive and negative statements. Besides that, the researcher analyzed the items by using SPSS 16. As the formula proposed by Sugiyono (2007:255):

$$r_{xy} = \frac{N \sum XY - \sum X \sum Y}{\sqrt{(N \sum X^2 - (\sum X)^2)(N \sum Y^2 - (\sum Y)^2)}}$$

Where: r_{xy} : coefficient correlation between variable X and Y

N : number of cases

$\sum X$: sum of item score square of score item

$\sum Y$: sum of total item

$\sum X^2$: sum of quadrate score of item

$\sum Y^2$: sum of quadrate of total score

Based on the use of the formula above, it was gotten 38 items valid, 10 items revised, and 2 items discarded. (See Appendix 7).

2. Reliability

According to Gay (2000:169) besides the validity, a good questionnaire should have reliability. It concern to what can depend on the result could be produced consistently. Next, Gay (2010:140) states “no test is perfectly reliable, but the smaller the measurement error, the more the test”. Reliability is a degree to which a test consistently measure.

To see the reliability of questionnaire, it was used indicators that relates with students' perception on group work technique to control the consistent of questionnaire. Next, it was constructed the questionnaire into negative and positive items. In analyzed the questionnaire, the researcher used SPSS 16. The researcher used Cronbach's Alpha formula. The formula can be seen as follow:

$$r_i = \left(\frac{n}{n-1} \right) \left(1 - \frac{\sum si^2}{\sum st^2} \right)$$

Where = : the reliability of the instrument

n : number of cases

si^2 : Varian of item statement

st^2 : varian of total statement

Based on the formula above the reliability was gotten 0.941. (See appendix 8)

2. Research Procedures

This research conducted by applying several steps. They were Preparation, Operation and Post-Operation.

a. Preparation

- 1) Focusing on the problem that researcher interested.
- 2) Collecting theories and references that are related to the research problem.
- 3) Preparing and writing the research proposal.
- 4) Consulted the research proposal with the advisors.
- 5) Revised the research proposal.

- 6) Had a seminar proposal.
 - 7) Prepared the instrument
- b. Operation

 - 5) Checked the questionnaire that the students have done
 - 6) Scored the questionnaire
 - 7) Analyzed the questionnaire
- c. Post-Operation
- 1) Interpret the data
 - 2) Took conclusion and suggestion

D. Technique of Data Analysis

After collecting the data, the researcher analyzed the data by using descriptive analysis. In this technique, the researcher used some steps. They are: giving code to the questionnaire (See Appendix 5), check the students' questionnaire, classified the students' answering, analyzed the students' answering and conducted percentages.

In analyzing the data, researcher used the descriptive quantitative analysis for calculating the percentage by using statistical data. The researcher used formulas proposed by Sudijono (2005:43). As follow;

$$P = \frac{F}{N} \times 100\%$$

It means : P = percentage of problem items

F = Frequency

N = Total Number of Respondents

For interpreting the result of the questionnaire, the researcher used the categories of interest and attitude suggested by Djemari et.al from Yogyakarta University page 28 as follow:

Table 5.
Data interpretation

Class Interval	Interpretation	F	%
$\geq(0.80 \times \text{max score})$	Strongly positive
$(0.60 \times \text{max score}) - (0.80 \times \text{max score})$	Positive
$(0.40 \times \text{max score}) - (0.60 \times \text{max score})$	Negative
$< (0.40 \times \text{max score})$	Strongly Negative

After calculating the percentage of each category of students' perception on the use of group work technique in improving their speaking ability, the researcher will draw the conclusion.

4. Discussion

Based on the data analysis about students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject, it had showed some assumption could be taken about students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject (A Study the Fifth Semester of English Teaching Department of STAIN Batusangkar Registered in 2015/2016 Academic Year). There is a Likert Scale to describe the students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject namely: strongly positive, positive, negative, and strongly negative.

Based on the data description and data analysis above, it can be seen that students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject was in positive category which mean score 186.90.

Specifically, these were students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject based on the components of perception. First, the students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject in term of cognitive component was in positive category which mean score 92.90.

Second, the percentage of students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject in term of affective component was in positive category which mean score 47.30.

Third, the percentage of students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject in term of conative component was positive category which mean score 46.69.

Finally, students' perception on the use of group work technique in Speaking V subject was positive based on the research finding. The students think that the group work technique in Speaking V subject gave contribution in improving their speaking ability. It can be seen from the result of the questionnaire that shows the students perception on three aspects. The aspects were: cognitive, affective and conative.

First, cognitive aspect or from the students' knowledge, opinion and belief about group work technique, the perception was positive because the students' think that by using group work technique they can share their idea with friends, made them to be an active and cooperative person in the group, help them in comprehending the material, and so forth. It is line with Harmer (2001: 117) who explains that the advantages of group work are: it promotes the amount of talking, it gives greater chance of different opinion and varied contributions than in pair work, it teaches students to cooperation and negotiation each other, students are free to make decision without being told what to do by the teacher and students can choose their level of participation.

Second, affective aspect or students' like and dislike toward an object. The perception was positive because the students' feel that by using group work technique they were interested in comprehend the material, increasing their self confidence, and improving their speaking ability. It is in line with Harker and Harker (2007:4) who argue the advantages of group work are: better communication skills, an opportunity to learn each other, an opportunity to explore an aspect of a project more deeply.

Last, conative aspect or students' action tendency toward an object. The perception was positive because the students attitude or behavior in following group work technique in speaking V subject was in positive term. They gave a good contribution in the group, they share the suggestion each other to be better, etc.
